

Questions for reflection – Acts 23

1. Do you live with a clear conscience before God? How do you make that assessment? What can be done for the person who struggles with this in light of their past?
2. In what ways is Paul's response to the high priest an example for us to follow when it comes to respecting those in authority and in what ways not?
3. In this chapter, how does Luke show us that God's sovereign purposes continue despite human opposition and resistance? Have you seen this in your own life?
4. How do you respond to stress that is caused by people treating you in a way you don't think is just or fair? What can you learn from these last few chapters of Acts in this regard?
